

EARTH'S CURATOR NATURE

- Mrs. Mavuru Durga Sree

As a tenant of this Earth, I would like to pledge that I will respect my other tenants and also the owner. The Owner for this Earth with the curator Nature, does not ask us for rental, instead gives us her services free of cost in the form of elements. Living in unfavorable situations, with a smile is life. Co-existing is what most of the other tenants think except for humans. Plants are co-workers along with the owner, who creates something out of the thin air for others to survive. Flora and Fauna around takes what is required for that day and never harms the environment in which they exist. Nature is our curator too.

Humans and their super human brains, have reached the other side of the universe, but have not learnt the basics of their own eco system. Crowd and chaos brings its definitions, but we forget morals in it most of the time.

Humans are now Intubating to avoid virus to incubate in human lungs. This should have been a non - essential task if we controlled our craving. Breathing without a ventilator is now a hercules task - a non essential task again.

It is high time that we apologies to our kids who became victims as collateral damage of our wrong deeds. They are paying more by giving away their freedom of space and play just to keep us safe. Their patience with adults at home is unparalleled. Human touch is one of the most comforting gesture. A sense of security and belonging is lost. Open expression of care, love and life is curtailed to flying kisses and lack that human touch. Their world changing over night with lock down.

Zoom out for a bird view, to reflect with eagles eye on what chaos have we created. A few days of lock down every year, will surely bring some reassurance to the ecosystem for human abuse. These small voyages in future will completely change the approach of human towards bionetwork.

"Tell my mistakes to me not to others. Because my mistakes are to be corrected by me". This is what we as humans need to think now. This is the time that all other tenants are looking at us and saying, well, why did it not affect our respiratory system? Why are we not drowning to death? Why are we not feeling helpless? Even in these situations of helplessness, we are not interrupting the eco system.

We humans now need to think about our hobbies that do not destroy ecological system and can give us health, wealth, wisdom and make us wise with comfort.

Let us all tenants of this Earth be curated by nature to rest at home safely rather than become a sore thumb which is hot and spiced with unwanted flavours and aromas.
